Digital Travel.com launched its site only last week and already has been receiving significant attention on the web. Visitors to the Digital Travel.com site will have access to the award-winning Biztravel.com(R) reservations system that allows customers to book air, car and hotel reservations that match personal preferences such as lowest cost and desire to maximize frequent flyer miles. Other features that can be found at Digital Travel.com include: the largest database of vacations and tours on the web, over 500 cruises to choose from, a European Hotel Discount program, Travel Store, and soon to come, an editorial section. Digital Travel.com, with its proprietary booking engine and exclusive tour content, is the only Internet travel company that can offer customers immediate online confirmation for vacations in over 60 countries. Other Internet travel companies require their customers to either call or email for availability.

Industry: LEISURE/TRAVEL/HOTELS; INTERNET MULTIMEDIA ONLINE

MARCO ISLAND, Fla., July 6 /PRNewswire/ -- The newest entry in the Internet travel industry, Digital Travel.com, announces a new affiliate revenue sharing program for non-travel Internet sites. The first of its type in the Internet travel industry, it provides substantial compensation in exchange for referrals that produce bookings.

Paul Cohen, Director of Industry Relations for the company, outlined Digital Travel.com's Affiliate Revenue Sharing Program at a meeting here today.

"We are offering an additional and significant revenue stream to those non-travel Internet companies who want to offer their customers the Internet's most comprehensive collection of Vacation and Tours packages, and receive a portion of the commission of sales generated from their customers," said Cohen. When asked how this differs from other affiliate programs such as Amazon.com and Barnes & Noble, Cohen agreed that, "our program is very similar to those companies' affiliate programs and we are pleased to acknowledge this. We aim to make it a snap for non-travel Internet companies to be a part of the exponential growth in the online travel industry. It is obviously a successful marketing strategy in the book industry. We have just adapted it for the travel industry. The big difference is one of magnitude. The average bounty is much higher for travel than it is for books. If you are going to send someone off your site, you might as well benefit as much as possible."

Digital Travel.com launched its site only last week and already has been receiving significant attention on the web. Visitors to the Digital Travel.com site will have access to the award-winning Biztravel.com(R) reservations system that allows customers to book air, car and hotel reservations that match personal preferences such as lowest cost and desire to maximize frequent flyer miles. Digital Travel.com, with its proprietary booking engine and exclusive tour content, is the only Internet travel company that can offer customers immediate online confirmation for vacations in over 60 countries. Other Internet travel companies require their customers to either call or email for availability.

Berthold Holly, Vice President of Tourism, said, "We handle processing of the order, and we handle all customer service and billing, and our affiliates earn the commissions. With the addition of our Affiliate program, our affiliates can add powerful tools to their sites. There is no cost to our affiliates to participate, and every time a customer purchases vacations or tour packages from our site, our affiliates benefit. We want to work with all sites whether they be individual web sites or large corporate sites."

The festivals are colorful, the historical sites are centuries old, the food is exotic and spicy, and the beaches are warm and inviting. And Mexico travel information is just a few mouse clicks away on the Internet.

The government Ministry of Tourism -- www.mexico-travel.com -- touts Mexico "for every reason . . . any season." Click on "Welcome to Mexico" to reach the English language pages on fiestas, beaches, archaeological sites, states and on and on.

If you explore the section on beaches, you can pick a place such as Cuyutlan, a one-hour flight from Mexico City on the Pacific Coast, and locate references to accommodations that range from three-star hotels to bungalows. Click on "Fiestas and Events" for holidays arranged by city, including the San Marcos National Fair running from April to May in Aguascalientes.

Mexico Connect magazine -- www.mexconnect.com/index.html -- has monthly feature articles, plus sections on destinations and culture. Its extensive food section includes recipes as well as references to regional food festivals.

More articles on destinations and fiestas can be found at Unknown Mexico -- www.mexdesco.com/indice.htm -- and take a look at its Web links for connections to other sources of information including museums and history.

The Mexico Travel Guide -- go2mexico.com -- has a little bit of everything, from travel tips and history to holidays and tips for seniors. They also offer a brief list of holidays; there's still time to plan a vacation visit around Cinco de Mayo, the May 5 celebration of the defeat of the French in 1862.

You'll find a category called "Traveler's Utilities" at Virtual Mexico -- virtualmex.com/index.html -- that includes an interactive map with travel distances, average weather for major cities and computer tools for converting metric to English measurements. And there are sections on tourist activities, general information and the latest satellite weather map.

You can find information on condos and beach houses, cruises, hotels and resorts, and maps at Mexico's Index -- www.trace-sc.com/cgi-bin/mxndx?tour.

And if you're thinking of taking your children, there are articles on family travel at travelwithkids.miningco.com/msubmexico.htm.

Abstract (Document Summary)

Yesterday morning the milk froze. Your feet are still wet from crossing the road. Jim Davidson still has a television career. Everything considered, the nation is in a sorry state, so it's just about the right time to jump ship to the Caribbean.

As a warm up, try www.caribbean-on-line.com. Click on an island, and the company that used to be owned by Cartographers Ltd will offer you the lowdown on dining, diving and villa rental, from St Lucia to Aruba.

www.caribbean-travel.com is more commercially minded, with restaurant reviews, a search engine and links to all the appropriate airlines. It looks gaudier than a colour-blind carnival-goer, but tenders useful tit-bits.

Yesterday morning the milk froze. Your feet are still wet from crossing the road. Jim Davidson still has a television career. Everything considered, the nation is in a sorry state, so it's just about the right time to jump ship to the Caribbean.

As a warm up, try www.caribbean-on-line.com. Click on an island, and the company that used to be owned by Cartographers Ltd will offer you the lowdown on dining, diving and villa rental, from St Lucia to Aruba.

www.caribbean-travel.com is more commercially minded, with restaurant reviews, a search engine and links to all the appropriate airlines. It looks gaudier than a colour-blind carnival-goer, but tenders useful tit-bits.

caribislands.net have the calendar for the islands over the forthcoming months. There's also a message board, and the chance to send someone an internet postcard of a nice beach without even having to bother going there.

As far as tickets go, last week, www.cheap flights.

co.uk were quoting pounds 199 London to Jamaica with Go Direct. If you have pounds 855 spare, www.thomascook.

co.uk can send you to Sosua in the Dominican Republic, for 14 nights from 1 March.

For a little more immediacy, www.cananews.com has the latest news from the islands, sports, and, more importantly, the weather. It's a 23 C low this weekend in St John's, Antigua.
